ADVERTISING

Has created many a new business;
Has enlarged many an old business;
Has revived many a dull business;
Has rescued many a lost business;
Has saved many a failing business;
Has preserved many a large business;
And insures success in any business.

GIRARD'S SECRET.—Stephen Girard used to say in his old age: "I have always considered advertising liberally and long to be the great medium of success in business, and the parent of wealth. And I have made it an invariable rule to advertise in dull times as well as the busiest, long experience having taught me that money thus spent is well laid out, as by continually keeping my business before the public it has secured many sales that I otherwise would have lost."

ADVERTISE YOUR BUSINESS.

KEEP YOUR NAME BEFORE THE PUBLIC.

JUDICIOUS ADVERTISING INSURES A FORTUNE.

IF BUSINESS IS DULL, ADVERTISE.

IF BUSINESS IS BRISK, ADVERTISE.

IN AND ABOUT BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 26th, 1873.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

Baltimore in winter is hardly as desirable a place as one might wish for. It is cold here much of the time, but snow does not lie on the ground long enough for sleighing purposes, so it is between and between. Philadelphia is different—much like the New England winters: biting cold, plenty of sleighing, skating, &c.

In summer this is a lively burg. People come out of their shells and there are plenty of places of amusements—parks, gardens, drives, etc. Old ROSS WINANS OF "CIGAR STEAMER" celebrity, has a perfect palace here. The grounds surrounding it are elegantly laid out, and almost crowded with choice shrubbery, flowers, arbors, fountains and statuary. The latter, which is elegant and of that description which is most admired because least adorned, came to be regarded by a certain portion of Mr. Winan's neighbors, who have none themselves and no money to buy with, as demoralizing to that class of the rising generation which is verging upon maturity. These people, upon whom the fickle goddess has shown too much self-respect to smile, on more than one occasion made complaint to the city authorities, stigmatizing the valuable and costly statuary aforementioned as "grossly indecent," and "calculated to exert ruinous influences upon the youth of the city." Of course, this little wail of ignorance and envy received no encouragement from the city fathers, but Mr. W—— who has passed eighty, isn't possessed of a very wonderfully ongelic temperament—ordered at length, the entire grounds concealed from the view of the public by a brick wall 18 feet in height. His wealth is upwards of $50,000,000 and rapidly augmenting. His sons, except one wild scamp, are wealthy, energetic and smart. Ross Winans lives in Russia, where, you will remember, he secured immense railway building concessions or contracts from the Russian Government, and from the operation of which (between St Petersburg and Moscow) by a condition of the articles he derives a kingly income. He has an extensive foundry and machine shops in this city, employing a small army of workmen for whose benefit he has constructed a young city, within the city, of commodious, well-built, brick houses, which he rents to them at a low rent.

Ross Winans came to Baltimore a young man without means save his trade as a machinist. He is very ingenious and has turned all his contrivances, among which are our wheels, dump coal cars—such as are used for loading coal on steamers—to, large pecuniary profit, receiving handsome royalties on all the important ones. His experiments upon the pet "Cigar Steamers"—one or two of which are now lying in the harbor here—have involved an outlay of upwards of four or five millions of dollars, and he has thus far failed to demonstrate the success of the idea.

At the intersection of St. Charles and Monument streets is erected to the memory of George Washington, surmounting which is a statue of the General. This is in charge of a watchman who, for the sum of 10 cents plies you to the top over a winding staircase, where you have a commanding view of the city and its surroundings. The people of Maryland take considerable stock in George. You know it was at Annapolis—the Capital—that he resigned his commission.

At Green Mount Cemetery, an unassuming slab marks the burial place of Wilkes Booth, the assassin of Lincoln.

PLACES OF AMUSEMENTS, ETC.

Theatres of all grades are plenty and well supported; saloons, ditto. The latter are required, by stringently enforced city ordinances, to close at midnight, and to remain closed upon the Sabbath. And the wayfaring man, if he be not a fool, by both his little jugfull on Saturday eve., and the seventh day findeth him, like the wise virgin, with his lamp filled and burning.

AN IDIOSYNCRACY.

The middle and lower classes of people, here and in Philadelphia, consider it a necessary token of respect, when a relative kicks the bucket, to append to the advertisement in the paper announcing such death, a few lines of poetry, and it is amusing to read them. They are generally ridiculous, though well meant. In reading the Ledger, I don't miss the death column. Very frequently the same identical lines used by one party in a certain issue will be used by half a dozen other afflicted individuals in the same issue, and have been used by others similarly for thirty or forty years. The Ledger is a morning daily (Sundays excepted), has a circulation, bona fide, of 87,000, and does a heavy advertising business. The Star (Phil's) a penny evening paper, has a heavy circulation also. The Press, Forney's, is still the solid journal of Philadelphia, though the Union League has tried hard, after reading him out of the party, to crush him. Forney, however, is of too heavy timber for such urchins. He did not oppose Grant, you know, but he did oppose Jno. F. Hartranft for Governor at the October election, and would not yield his opposition. Hartranft was elected, however, though unquestionably obnoxious to very many who voted for him, because Republicans feared the effect upon the Presidential election of allowing the Republican candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania to be beaten.

SIMON CAMERON,

owns Pennsylvania, politically. He is a sharp man, unscrupulous, fairly off pecuniarily, and will stay in the U. S. Senate as long as he chooses—the Destroying Angel willing.

POSTAL TELEGRAPH.

There has been much talk regarding postal telegraph, and much money will be used by the "Third House." It is said that the President has for a long time privately endorsed Postmaster General Cresswell's views, but it is very certain that whatever the manipulators of the Western Union—among whom Mr. Orton and Jay Gould are prominent—proposes to do, will be done. If they could turn the concern over to the Government at their figures, of course they would do it. Otherwise they have on hand an abundance of that argument which so readily persuades M. C.'s and U. S. S.'s to a desired conclusion.

THE CREDIT MOBILIER

is the topic now, and it seems to be getting hotter for the "Hon.'s" implicated, every day. Several Congressmen implicated held a very private consultation here yesterday. S.

Letter From St Joe.

ST. JOE, Feb. 14, 1873

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

It is rainy and cold, decidedly disagreeable outdoors. Fairing off to-day evidently is not a success up this way.

This morning whilst working the draw in the bridge a bar slipped from the hands of R. Malone, who was tending one of the cranks, and struck him across the arm below the shoulder, rebbing the limb.

I learn from the stage driver that Justice Spencer of McMinnville, before whom Coxton has been under examination since Monday, will today be bound over for his appearance before the grand jury upon the charge of the murder of Hasbrook last week on the Willamina. The examination has been very tedious and exciting a great deal of public interest.

Dr. Morris has left this place and located in Oregon City.

There are no immediate signs of Modocs in Lafayette at present, though there are occasional warlike symptoms in which revolvers play a conspicuous part.

At Ohio recently a lady at church was seen to bow her head as if in pious thought. She suddenly raised and leaned back against the seat, when an explosion occurred that shook the building. She had pressed too heavily on an air cushion beside.

A Christmas dancing party sadly came to grief at a place called Lotterville in Pennsylvania. The barn took fire and about twenty horses and sleighs belonging to the guests were consumed, leaving the beaux and belles to foot it home in the snow as best they could.

OREGON.

The river rose ten feet, at Salem, last Thursday and night included.

The Supreme Court "ground" most of the past week with only three judges at the wheel.

The contractor has broken ground for the erection of the new M. E. Church South, at Salem.

C. G. Curl, Clerk of the Supreme Court of the State, is still confined to his home by sickness.

Dr. O P. S. Plummer is delivering a course of lectures before the medical class in the Willamet University.

James Johnson, Esq., one of the early settlers of Linn county, died at his residence in Syracuse Precinct, on the 5th inst., of dropsy.

A few days ago a little child of Mr. A. B. Falkner, of Sheridan, while playing around a tub of lye, fell head foremost into the tub and was drowned.

The various societies interested in the temperance cause at Salem, will send an army of Delegates to the Alliance which meets at that place next week.

Fall wheat up the valley is growing finely and never looked better. There was a much greater breadth of land sown in wheat last fall than ever before in this county.

County Treasurer McCarver, of Clackamas, last Friday, paid to the State Treasurer the full amount of State taxes due from the county. The amount was $11,700 05.

The Reporter says. "Eighty cases of measles were reported at Dayton at last accounts. Everybody had it except Chris. Taylor, and he sends us word, that although out and around now, he expects every day to be confined with the pesky things."

The Enterprise says: "A man named Cox, residing near Butteville, was brought before Judge Wait, at Oregon City, last Saturday, and adjudged to be insane. He was taken to the asylum on the same day in charge of Deputy Sheriff Hedges and City Marshal Richardson."

On last Monday night J. H. and J. S. Fenn, who reside near the road leading from this city to Jefferson, lost by fire, about 400 bushels of coal which they had just burned and put under a shed. Two cross-cut saws and other tools were also destroyed. Loss, about $100.

Friday, the 7th inst, there was a grand ball at Scio, a report of which says they had a rare good time; danced lively until 11 o'clock, when a sumptuous repast was furnished. The wines furnished on the occasion must have been of an inferior quality, as four fights was all it produced.

The Statesman says: "Wonders will never cease. Now thieves have broken through and stolen from our sanctum. It may seem incredible that there should be anything to steal in such a place; but it so happened Tuesday night. It may never happen again; no fear it won't. If the young hoodlum will bring back the articles he took away, we will thank him and say nothing, or will lick him like thunder—we have not yet fully decided which. Two days grace given."

The Yamhill Reporter, of the 13th inst, says: The trial of Joseph Coxon, on charge of the murder of Benjamin Hasbrook, rendered by the coroner's jury on their investigation of the case, has been occupying the attention of not only the Justice's Court, but every body else in this place during the whole week so far, and up to the time of our going to press, only the witnesses for the complaint had been examined. Great interest is drawn to the proceedings, and the court room crowded continually. The counsel for the defense yesterday evening offered a motion to dismiss the case for want of evidence, which motion was overruled and the defendant's witnesses are now being examined. The case is receiving a most searching and thorough investigation by Prosecuting Attorney Hurley, and is being ably defended by Messrs. McClain and Handley.

THE TERRITORIES.

The local of the Tribune says Miss Kate Denin sings more sweetly than a nightingale.

The Prince Alfred on her recent trip from San Francisco to Victoria carried 460 tons of freight for the latter place, but none for ports in Washington Territory, the Secretary of the Treasury having interdicted that trade.

E. S. Kearney, U. S. Marshal for Washington Territory, arrived at Olympia on the 12th inst., having in his custody three U. S. prisoners, who were convicted at the present term of the U. S. District Court at Seattle of selling liquor to Indians, and were sentenced to imprisonment to the Thurston County Jail, from three to six months. Their names are Levi Andrews, James Good and Peter Riley. E. G. Reading charged with the same offense was acquitted.

The Olympia Tribune says: There are it is said fully 9,000 sheep on San Juan Island alone. On each of the other lately disputed islands, there are also sheep, but in smaller numbers than on San Juan. These islands are peculiarly adapted to sheep husbandry, and but very little of other stock is kept. The number of squatters who have gone to the islands since the arbitration is estimated at 700, and as there were 200 there before, and each man claims 160 acres, and there is yet more land untaken, the large area of these islands may be imagined.

OUR PETITION.—Through the kindness of Mr. Gustaff Wilson, we are permitted to publish the following letter received by him

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27, 1873.

MR. GUSTAFF WILSON: The petition from you containing several hundred names, asking for the passage of the bill introduced by me for improvement of the Yamhill river, was duly received and presented to the Senate. I shall do all I possibly can to have it embraced in the river and harbor appropriations. The only difficulty I apprehend in the matter, will arise from want of survey and estimate. I shall make an effort, however, notwithstanding this want of information and hope to get the appropriation. Yours truly,

H. W. CORBETT.

We learn further in this matter, that Maj. Robert has been consulted, and signifies his intention to visit the Yamhill river as soon as there is any need, and make a survey and estimate.—Yamhill Reporter.

IMPORTANT INSURANCE DECISION.—An important decision of this character was rendered recently at Springfield, Ill., by the United States Circuit Court. The case was that of Daniel H. Tooley vs the Railway Passenger Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut. It was on trial for several days, and resulted in a verdict for plaintiff for $6,603, under the rulings of the court. It appears that John Tooley, brother of Daniel Tooley, plaintiff, bought two accident policies for $8,000 each for two days, at Quincy, Ill., on the 24th of January, 1871. On the 25th of January, at Champaign, he was killed while attempting to get on the cars, which were in motion. The defense rested on two points: first, when Tooley got off the train at Champaign, the liability of the company ceased, as he was by the terms of the policy insured against accident on the train; second, if a passenger, technically at the time, he did not exercise due diligence as required by the terms of his policy. The defense, as the result of the case showed, was of no avail.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Congressional.

WASHINGTON, Feb 14.—In the Senate a number of bills were reported from committees

A resolution was adopted appropriating $8,000 to pay the expenses of committees to investigate the charges of bribery in the late Senatorial election in Kansas

A bill was introduced prohibiting the several Territories from giving or loaning their credit to railroad companies.

The Committee on Pensions reported without amendment, House bill to restore to the pension rolls the names of pensioners of the war of 1812, dropped therefrom on account of sympathy with the late rebellion

The naval appropriation bill was then taken up. The first amendment by the committee increasing the amount for the Pacific coast was agreed to.

In the Senate Stewart introduced a bill authorizing the President to appoint a Board of Commissioners consisting of two army engineers, one coast surveyor, an officer now on the Pacific coast, to report a plan of irrigation for the San Joaquin and Tulare valleys, in California. The officers above designated may call on the chief of geological survey, of California, and some other distingu

The Towing Business Again.

A conversation with Captain Flavel, who represents the owners of the tug boat Astoria, leads us to return to the subject of towage and pilotage on the Columbia river bar. Looking at the matter from the Captain's standpoint, we did him injustice in our strictures upon the manner in which that business is done—or, rather, not done. The Captain says he is not acting now under his contract with the State, does not claim the subsidy any longer, and consequently is under no greater obligations than any other citizen to see that vessels approaching the bar are met by a tow boat to bring them into harbor. There is no question made that vessels approaching the entrance to the river are often delayed, although Captain Flavel is of the opinion that masters frequently overstate the length of their delays in order to make the time of the actual voyage as short as possible. It may be true that in some instances this mode of advertising the sailing qualities of their vessels and the seamanship of themselves, is resorted to by masters, but we can hardly suppose it to be a common occurrence. At all events, it is notoriously true, that vessels do lie off the bar from five to fifteen days awaiting towage, and that, too, when the bar is not so rough as to be at all dangerous for the passage of a vessel in tow of a steam-propelled tug boat. The Columbia bar is not a more dangerous entrance than a majority of those visited by shipping. But it is not considered as safe to come in under sail as under steam. At other harbors sailing vessels meet tugs, and they are little inclined to attempt the Columbia river without such assistance. Especially is this true of masters who have never before visited this harbor. Their being neglected in this respect is a great detriment to our commerce. It is an injury to the interests of every town and district whose trade passes over the Columbia bar.

Admitting that Captain Flavel is no longer acting under his contract with the State, nor claiming the State subsidy, still the business he is in is one that affects the welfare of the State, and is for this reason a legitimate subject of criticism. So long as he holds himself out to the world as one who is engaged in accommodating the shipping of the State with towage and pilotage at the entrance to the river, he is no more entitled to exemption from public criticism for neglect of that service, than the Oregon Steamship Company or the O. S. N. Co. (both of which are simply private corporations) would be if they neglected to attend to the comfort and safety of passengers and carriage of freight when brought to their boats. Persons who undertake to serve the public must serve as well as the nature of the case will admit of, whether they are subsidized by the Government or not. If the case is as Captain Flavel puts it, he is not blameable to the same extent as if he were under subsidy; but still the neglect of those vessels would be far from justifiable. Looking at the matter in this light the only injustice we did in our former article, was that we did not include in our remarks the other boats that offer themselves for this service, as well as the Astoria. It matters not who undertakes this public business, the neglect of it by such person is unjustifiable in itself and an injury to the State.

But we do not fully comprehend the idea that the Astoria is not acting under the subsidy contract and directly responsible to the State. The act under which she was put on the bar, gave her a subsidy of $12,000 for the first year, $6,000 for the second, $5,000 for the third, $4,000 for the fourth and $3,000 for the fifth, besides large fees and certain exclusive privileges. In order to obtain this subsidy the owners of the tug were required to enter into an obligation to the State to keep the boat at the pilot grounds and in readiness for use, and to perform the stipulated services for the entire five years. This obligation they did enter into, and actually drew the subsidy for two years—$12,000 and $6,000. By what line of reasoning the managers of the tug can justify themselves in abandoning the contract now, when the cream of the subsidy has been taken by them, we are unable to imagine. The State has paid them $18,000 for two years' service. By the terms of the contract they were to perform other three years service for $12,000. We understand that the grounds upon which the contract is thus set at naught is, that after the passage of the law by our Legislature, Congress, by some one of those acts which were smuggled through in the interest of Mr. Holladay, greatly impaired the value of the towing business at the Columbia bar, so that the contract did not pay nearly so well as was expected at the time it was made. It is somewhat remarkable that this was not known, or, if known, was not acted upon by the management of the tug, till after it had drawn $18,000 of the subsidy. If this fact can be explained, the people of this State, who have paid their money to encourage shipping to their principal harbor, and are getting nothing in return, would like to hear the explanation.

Disraeli, in his attack on the foreign policy of the Gladstone Ministry a few days since, maintained that the first advance of Russia on the Indus or on Constantinople should be the signal for a declaration of war from England. The announcement was received with loud cheers. At the same time it may be remarked as an evidence of the hostility of his party to the Premier, a similar sentiment in the Queen's speech was received with profound silence. Before fanning the sparks of a war spirit into flame, it may be well for England to count the fearful cost of a contest with her powerful neighbor. During the last year, Russia has been steadily improving her army discipline, has introduced new arms and armaments of the most approved patterns, and increased the numerical military force of the Empire to 739,000 men subject to active duty in time of peace, and 621,000 reserves. A power as formidable as this is not to be terrified into a withdrawal of her designs on Asia and the Indies.

In the English Parliament the following bills have lately been introduced: A bill for the purchase of the railroads by the Government; to remove the political disabilities of women; for the abolition of capital punishment; providing that all treaties between Great Britain and foreign powers must receive ratification by Parliament; legalizing marriage with a deceased wife's sister; and looking to the establishment of a protectorate over the Fiji Islands.

It will be seen by our St. Jo letter that Carton, the man suspected of the murder of Mr. Hasbrook, on the Wallamina, has been held to answer a charge of murder.

An Intelligent Farmer on the Freight Question.

Mr. Philip Lowe, of Tangent, Linn county, writes a very intelligent and interesting letter to the Albany Democrat on the question of protecting the farmers against the middle men. He has evidently given the subject a patient and thorough examination, and writes from the point of a complete mastery of his subject. His letter shows that the farmers are fully awake to a sense of their situation, and are acquainted with the causes of the hard times under which they suffer. The middle men—the carriers and the speculators—have the market in their own hands, and manipulate it to suit their convenience and fill their pockets. But we think Mr. Lowe does not allow a sufficient amount of the extortion to the account of the carrier. He puts the cost of the shipment from Astoria to Liverpool at $15 per ton. No charter was obtained at that price during the last year. At least $7 50 per ton will have to be added to those figures to reach the price of charters for the past harvest.

But even allowing this additional amount for freight from Astoria to Liverpool, there is still too great a margin. The farmer is simply eaten up by the enormous freight charges, commissions, sacks, insurance, wastage, and speculators' profits. Every bushel of wheat he sends away, he must send a bushel and a half additional along to pay its way. We do most sincerely hope the efforts of the farmers to secure co-operative action among themselves in some measure for the protection against these oppressions, may meet with such success as will accomplish the desired result. Upon this, more than upon any other one thing, must the prosperity of Oregon depend for years to come, and until we shall be able to counteract, in great measure, the high rates of freight, by diversifying our industries and sending away proportionately less of our bulky products. It will be a long time before we can hope to export much besides our farm products, or to find a market for these at home. For this reason it is the more vitally important that our farmers should have the advantages of the cheapest possible freights on what they do send away.

In June last President Grant vetoed a bill that had been passed by Congress which provided for the payment of a considerable sum of money to Dr. Bust, of Paducah, Kentucky, in compensation for property destroyed by Northern troops during the war. It was urged in behalf of the claim that the destruction was unnecessary and avoidable; that the property was sacrificed in a spirit of revenge. The Executive sanction was withheld on the ground that the approval of one would bring to Congress an army of claimants whose demands, though unworthy, might be urged as equally just. The claim has been before the Senate Committee on Claims ever since the veto was published. A few days since Senator Howe, from that Committee, reported back the bill with the recommendation that it do pass, notwithstanding the veto of the President. The Sacramento Union urges the queer logic that if this claim should be paid it would "invite an army of thieves to the capital to prey upon the Treasury." We should say, if the circumstances detailed by the Committee are true, the sufferer should be compensated for the wanton destruction of his property. Then we would trust to Providence and a purified Congress for protection from the "army of thieves."

At a meeting of the Dominion Board of Trade, held at Ottawa in January, the Canada Pacific railway project was under discussion, when Honorable John Young opposed the building of the road on the route proposed in the Government scheme, and presented a strong array of facts and figures to show the impracticability of that route. He was in favor of the construction of a road, but believed that the best route and the one that would eventually prove most advantageous to the country, would be from Sault Ste. Marie and Duluth, through American territory to Pembina, and thence to Fort Garry and the Saskatchawan valley, where it would be identical with the line proposed by the Government. The St. Paul Press says of Mr. Young's remarks:

> He argued that while the cost of freight on a bushel of wheat from Fort Garry to Montreal by the projected Government route would be 55 cents, it would, by way of Duluth and the Georgian Bay to Montreal, be not more than 28 cents—the difference, of course, going into the pocket of the producer. The Board of Trade, unlike similar conclaves in the United States, refrained from expressing an opinion on the subject, doubtless because Mr. Young is the only man in Canada that takes a sensible and business-like view of the matter, while his arguments and statistics were too conclusive to be ignored.

A late Berlin dispatch has this:

> The Spencer Gazette hopes the United States will annex the Sandwich Islands, but it deprecates the acquisition of Cuba, because it would be difficult to Americanize an island where climate, religion and manners are so different from those of the States. The incorporation of the Sandwich Islands with the American Republic, however, would be a benefit to civilization.

From all which we may infer that there is some natural affinity between the American and the Kanaka which does not exist between us and the Cuban.

The census of Cuba, which has just been completed, gives the whole population at 1,339,811, divided as follows:

Whites	763,176
Free Colored	128,927
Slaves	235,288
Asiatics (coolie slaves)	34,320

These figures show a decrease of 14,706 since the census of 1867 was taken.

The Timber Lands of Oregon.

The Washington correspondent of the San Francisco Bulletin says:

> A bill of considerable importance to the Pacific coast has been reported by Mr. Slater, of Oregon, and passed by the House, providing for the sale of timber lands. It provides that each actual and bona fide settler upon or owner of untimbered lands shall be entitled to enter, at the proper local land office, timbered lands which have been or may be hereafter surveyed, not exceeding forty acres for each quarter section of 160 acres, or less subdivision of untimbered land occupied or owned by such applicant, at the price of $1 25 per acre, unless such timbered lands sought to be entered be within the exterior lines of any grant to aid in the construction of railroads, in which case the price shall be two dollars and forty cents per acre; provided that no person shall be allowed to enter more than one hundred and sixty acres of timbered lands under the provisions of this act. And provided further, that before such entry shall be allowed, the applicant shall make satisfactory proof that he is an actual and bona fide settler upon or owner of timbered land, particularly describing the same; and that such lands have not sufficient timber growing thereon for their improvement and support; and provided also, that no second entry of timbered lands shall be allowed to be made under the provisions of this act by any subsequent owner of any untimbered lands for the benefit of which one entry of timbered lands has already been made. And all timbered lands entered under the provisions of this act shall be within thirty miles of the untimbered lands described in the proof and application.
> It is confidently expected that the bill will also be passed this session by the Senate.

Eastern Washington—Its Resources and Advantages.

We extract from the columns of the Walla Walla Union the following concerning the Eastern portion of Washington Territory for the information of those who desire to learn of the advantages which the north-west coast offers to the emigrant or those wishing to settle in an agricultural or stock growing country. The article is written in answer to questions propounded by a correspondent who writes for such information:

CLIMATE.

During the summer months, it is perhaps, about as warm as in Indiana, during the daytime, but it is always cool and comfortable at night. The nights are never so sultry as to prevent sleep. We do not have much rain here during the summer, still crops are never seriously affected with drought. In the autumn we have more or less rain and frost, and the weather usually continues quite mild until along in the month of December. As a general thing our winter sets in about Christmas. It is not a usual thing for us to have more than six or eight weeks of winter weather. And during that time it is not a common thing for us to see the thermometer down to zero. The nature of our winters will be more readily understood when we say that there are thousands of head of stock that have been raised here, and bid fair to die of old age, that never have, and perhaps never will receive a mouthful of prepared feed.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

Vegetables of all kinds that are raised in the Northern and Middle States are raised successfully and in great abundance here. It is unnecessary to particularize—they all do finely. As for fruit, our apples, pears, plums, cherries, peaches and grapes are as good as can be found anywhere. Peaches and grapes are especially successful—we can equal California in those fruits and beat almost any other country in both quantity and quality. Although this is like all other countries—some years the fruit crop is short; still, it is never a failure. All sorts of small fruits and berries do well. Wheat, oats, rye, barley and corn are all raised here. Oats is not, as a general thing, a first-rate yielding crop, and is not very extensively raised, yet in some localities it does well. Corn is not extensively cultivated, yet it does reasonably well, and produces from 25 to 40 bushels per acre. Hereafter it will be more extensively produced than formerly, as our people are just commencing to raise hogs quite extensively. Barley yields about 40 bushels per acre, and will grow and do well in our dryest farming lands. Rye grows well and yields well, but it is almost entirely raised for hay; it is seldom threshed, and it is impossible for us to say what the yield per acre would be. Wheat is more generally and more extensively raised than any other grain crop. Fall wheat is sown at all times from June to January, and winter and spring wheat from January until April. It is safe to say that the fall crop averages from 25 to 30 bushels per acre, although under favorable circumstances and with good tillage it will far exceed this figure.

TILLABLE LANDS.

This is rather a difficult question to answer. We have the Blue mountains in the southeast and the Cascades to the west of us. Between these lies the valley of the Columbia river, from 150 to 200 miles wide, and extending from north to south the width of our Territory, say 200 miles. This is all good for either farming or stock raising. In some places wood and water are scarce and the country is only fit for pasturage—just what proportion is fit for farming we could not say, but we will say that there is still room for thousands of farms to be made on as fine land as can be found on the continent, on land that is unclaimed and is open to settlement either by homestead and pre-emption.

MARKETS.

This question shows the worst side of our country. We have a market for a limited amount of our produce in the mines, in an easterly direction from here—generally from 200 to 500 miles away. Our transportation in those directions is generally done by teams, or pack-trains, and is, of course, expensive. The only other market we now have is at Portland, in Oregon, 250 miles to the west of us. Our transportation in this direction is 30 miles by wagon, and the balance of the way by steamboat. The freight charges are rather high, and it is a little like "taking coals to Newcastle," as Portland is the market for all the Willamette valley. So we have to sell at the same prices as those who do not have to pay one fourth as much to market their produce as we do. It is evident then that in this direction we are at a great disadvantage. In this respect the indications are that in a short time we are to be greatly benefited, as there is a fair prospect of our having direct communication and transportation by steamboat and railroad from this place to the seaboard, on Puget Sound. It is expected that this will be accomplished within the present year. During the present season there will be two railroads under construction through the section of country of which we have been writing—the Walla Walla and Columbia River Railroad, running from Walla Walla to the Columbia river, at Wallula, a distance of about thirty miles, which will connect with steamboats at that place, and the Northern Pacific Railroad which it is expected will be completed from the Columbia river, at a point about thirty five miles from this place, to Pen d'Oreille Lake, in Idaho Territory.

MISCELLANEOUS.

We presume that $10 per acre would be about an average for good improved farming land situated handy to town—fenced and plowed. If, however, there was a farm house, barn or orchard, the value of this would have to be added. But as times are pretty hard here there are instances when a man with the money could buy a farm well improved by paying about what the improvements are worth. These are exceptional cases, however.

Good work horses rate from $100 to $150 per head. Carriage and race horses are valued here as elsewhere, in accordance with the length of time that it will take for them to "do" their mile.

Wherever the country is well settled up, every child has a good opportunity for going to school. Now and then a family moves away from the settlements, and of course these children have no school privileges.

In some localities there is any amount of wild game.

We have confined ourselves to the section known as Eastern Washington, as that is the only portion that can be called an agricultural country. West of the Cascades the country is nearly covered with timber, and is well situated for commerce, lumbering, fishing, etc.; but Eastern Washington is a prairie country and has no superior in point of agriculture and stock-raising.

The area of the States and Territories on the Pacific, or nearest thereto, in acres, is in round numbers about as follows:

	Acres.
California	121,000,000
Oregon	61,000,000
Nevada	72,000,000
Arizona	72,000,000
Washington	45,000,000
Idaho	56,000,000
Utah	54,000,000
Total acreage	480,000,000

Up to June 30th, 1871, there had been surveyed by the United State surveyors in these States and Territories the following acreage in each:

	Acres
California	35,000,632
Oregon	10,150,281
Nevada	4,876,447
Arizona	1,901,243
Washington	5,775,719
Idaho	1,523,055
Utah	3,702,946
Total acres surveyed	61,929,425

SATURDAY MORNING FEBRUARY 15 1873

A Doubt Proceeding —A few nights ago a select party was given at the residence of one of our most prominent citizens Among other delectable refreshments provided for the evening was a quantity of ice cream In order to keep it fresh and prevent the delicious substance from thawing it was left standing in a large jar on the rear stoop But while the assembled guests were gaily chatting or swinging in the giddy waltz to the strains of music some graceless scamp who whose eyes dwelt not the fear of the law stole the ice cream away and after eating to his heart s content threw the remainder out on the sidewalk not far from the house At the hour when disembodied spirits walk forth clad in the apparel of sleep the sound of revelry died away, and the wearied guests repaired to the dining room to partake of the delicate refreshments and feast on the ice cream But when the lady of the house went to the porch to get that part of the jar and contents were spirited to unknown quarters An inspection of the premises showed that the thief who evidently could appreciate a good thing had eaten his fill and then deposited the cream on the sidewalk To add insult to injury the scalawag carried off the jar which contained the cream. In all the annals of petty villainies this is the coolest thing of which we have yet heard The thief struck a big thing on us and it is the devout wish of those who were robbed of their share of the cream that he may be called upon to suffer all the imaginable pangs of an overloaded stomach

Intoxicated —A small boy was brought to the Police Court on Thursday evening in a condition of maudlin intoxication In that state he was found on Front street trying helpless on the sidewalk His age did not exceed twelve years By some means this boy became possessed of a small sum of money which he proceeded to expend for a bottle of port wine Having little idea of the effects of the liquor, he drank sufficient quantity to render him limp and insensible After passing the night in a cell, he was arraigned before the Police Court yesterday morning, and sentenced to the city jail for three days With a deep sense of humility and mortification the father proceeded to the court and after interceding for his son the Judge relented and allowed the youthful offender to to depart in consideration of his tender age and it being his first offense The fact has been at last to force itself on the mind of the humane and Christian portion of this public that Portland is developing a class of youthful drunkards The argument in favor of the establishment of a Reform School is becoming more cogent every day

The Bark Northumbria —The British bark Northumbria, Capt Hick in command, arrived at this port on Thursday evening The bark comes from Valparaiso, in ballast She is under charter to Messrs Hewett, Wilson & Co, to carry a cargo of wheat to the United Kingdom The Northumbria sailed from Valparaiso on the 14th of December After a moderately fair voyage of 59 days the bar was reached on the 11th inst Wind and weather being favorable the vessel sailed across the bar on the following day, and arrived at Astoria This bark was built at Hartlepool, in 1865 Her dimensions are Length, 181 feet, depth of hold, 19 feet, breadth of beam 27.6 feet Registered capacity 600 tons carrying capacity 900 tons The hull is built of iron after an approved model and in the staunchest manner possible At present the bark lies at anchor opposite the gas company's wharf When the Saxboo completes discharging her ballast the Northumbria will occupy her berth and be relieved of her ballast.

Grand Concert and Ball.—On the evening of the 4th of March a Grand Concert and Ball will be given under the auspices of Baker Post, G A R, at the Skating Rink As before stated, the object of the ball is for the purpose of raising a sufficient sum of money to defray the expenses on Decoration Day, May 30th, 1873 The Concert will be conducted by Mr. J. B Wyatt assisted by Geo L DePrans and other talented and favorably known musicians to the public The 21st Infantry Band have volunteered their services for the occasion Eight pieces will be furnished for the ball, and the cotillion music will probably be the finest ever discovered in the city. The commodious Skating Rink has been procured, which is of sufficient capacity to allow forty sets to dance at one time It is the intention of the managers to have the affair prove one of the grandest social events of the season.

District School Reports—Second Notice —Clerks of the various School Districts of Multnomah county are notified to make their returns to the County Superintendent's office on or before March 3d.

All Districts which have held a term of school three months, or longer, are entitled to county funds, in proportion to the number of school age (from 4 to 20 years)

Clerks will please state number of legal school voters According to the new law, a residence of thirty days previous to a meeting, and the ownership of "property in the district, subject to assessment and taxation" are necessary in order to vote Also "women who are widows, and have children to educate and taxable property" are entitled to vote, in person or by proxy

Without a Pilot —In a conversation with Captain Hick, of the bark Northumbria, we learn that he has no complaints to lodge against the tug boat at the mouth of the Columbia The bark arrived off the bar on the 11th, and, availing of the favorable weather, sailed in without difficulty and did not deem have on board a pilot The tug Astoria was but a short distance ahead having in tow another vessel, and the captain of the Northumbria easily followed in the wake of the tow Had he not been enabled to take advantage of the good weather and pass without a tug, the probabilities are that the experience in the matter of tedious delays would have been similar to that of many other masters who were detained off many days, compelled to await the convenience or option of the tug.

An Ass in a Lion's Skin —It is announced that Chaney, the fortune teller, who has become unenviably noted of late, will on Sunday evening scold society for not letting his kind in Among other insane propositions he will attempt to maintain that the Bible is the "Great Enemy of Woman." This is evidently intended as an answer to Mrs Duniway's lecture, in which she proved what all the practical effects of the Christian religion illustrates that the Bible is the 'Great Friend of Woman" Just think of the impudence of this imbecile juggler essaying to answer Mrs Duniway upon any subject! But then lunatics are not supposed to possess the finest sense of propriety

Old Pioneer Dead —Mr Orrin Kellogg Sr departed this life yesterday morning at the residence of his son Capt Jos Kellogg in this city Deceased was one of the old pioneers of the State having arrived on this coast at an early day He was born in the year 1789 and was consequently in his 82d year Mr Kellogg was a member of the Masonic fraternity quite early in life and was the oldest Mason in Oregon at the time of his demise He was well respected and leaves many surviving friends and relatives to mourn his departure The remains will be removed to Oregon City for interment

Hands Struck —The deck hands heretofore employed on the steamer E N Cooke struck for higher wages yesterday It seems that they had been receiving $45 per month, and concluded that their services were of greater value to the Company, and, accordingly, asked for five dollars more per month The Company failed to see it and the men left in a body A number of raw hands were employed in place of the strikers yesterday and in consequence of inexperience on the part of the hands, the boat did not leave for Oregon city until late in the evening

To Lecture —Mr, A J Dufer, at the urgent request of a number of prominent citizens of this city, will deliver a lecture at Oro Fino Theater on next Tuesday evening at 7 30 o'clock His subject will be the great Celebration of our Centennial Anniversary and World s Industrial Exposition to be held in Philadelphia in 1876

Father Mathew Society — At last meeting of this Society held last Thursday evening Mr L J Bryan was elected President to fill the vacancy occasioned by the departure of Rev C Delahunty We learn that the Father Mathew T A B Society is prospering gaining new and useful members at each meeting

Fire Box —On the last steamer the fire box for the new steamer Governor Grover arrived and was placed on board that boat yesterday The boiler is rapidly approaching the finishing touches and will be ready for use in a week or so Both the cylinders of the engines have been completed and are on board

Chicken Thieves —Three small boys were arrested yesterday by the police charged with stealing from a hen house in the upper part of the city The little rascals on being arrested pleaded guilty to the soft impeachment and confounded the officers to whom they fess were referred Their case will be inquired into this morning

Rapid Ironing —This little schooner sailed for Tillamook yesterday evening with a full freight Aided by a stiff breeze and borne on the strong current the schooner sculled down the river under a full press of canvass and unless hindered by the darkness of the night must be well on the passage to Astoria ere this

Death of Mr C M Lockwood —Mr R B Hood of Dallas City writes to Mr I W Perrine that he has received news of the death of Mr C M Lockwood, at Detroit from apoplexy The date is not given Mr L has been ill for some months and once before has been reported dead

Iron Gone —The ship Ida was towed down the river yesterday morning by the tug Active She was drawing over seventeen feet of water, This vessel was taken down to Astoria at which port the balance of her cargo will be placed on board

Train Arrived —The steamer Gussie Telfair arrived at port last night from Victoria and Sound ports She brought three passengers and a small cargo Nothing whatever was heard of the steamer Geo S Wright over due here

There will be divine services held at the basement of the First Presbyterian church, in the German language to morrow at 3 o clock P M German Sabbath school held every Sunday at the same place at 2 o clock P M

At the First Congregational Church there will be preaching in the morning by the pastor, J D Eaton The evening will be occupied by a Sabbath School concert, consisting of singing, Scripture recitations and addresses

New Boat —A Portland correspondent of the Albany Democrat states that Nat H Lane, of East Portland, soon intends to commence building a steamboat intended to ply on the waters of the Willamet

Window shades, cornices, curtains, picture nails etc also all kinds of upholstery work done at Paul Richter s

HOURS OF PLEASURE

Quite a large assembly of young people together with a number in the meridian of life wended their steps to the residence of Theodore Wygant, Esq, on Wednesday evening, with the object of surprising that gentleman and his lady and to spend the evening in dancing and social chit chat The affair was so quietly arranged that the hostess, who was absent, was completely taken by surprise at the unlooked for gathering No time was lost in placing the parlors in order for the introduction of festivities An excellent string band was called in, and the many couples were whirling about in the liveliest manner possible The various round dances and quadrilles were indulged in with zest and the hours passed away rapidly, affording much pleasure to all who took part Towards the close the company sat down to a collation, after which those present tripped away till the clock gave token that the "wee small hours were approaching, when the party began to take their departure for their homes We present a partial list of the ladies present Miss Fanny E—r, Miss B—k, Miss Angie H—y, Miss Etta U—n, the Misses D—n Misses Hattie H—n, Miss Sadie H—t, Miss Libbie V—n, Miss Emma S—g Miss Abbie A—d, Mrs W J Van S—r, Mrs Dr Ii—h Mrs V C—h, Mrs Peter B—y, Mrs Judge U—n Among the gentlemen were James L—w, Colonel Dudley E—s, Ed C—m, General John McC—n, Judge U—n, Ivan D—n, Daniel H—y W W F—s, Charles U—n, Thomas E—n, P. B—y, —W—bb

The fact that over one hundred cards of invitation had been sent to persons throughout the city, was sufficient in effect to indicate that a numerous assemblage of the elite of Portland would be in attendance at the brilliant party given at the residence of the Hon Judge Deady on Thursday evening The spacious parlors of that gentleman's house were litterally filled with some of our most prominent people Few parties have been given in the city where so many elegant dresses were displayed Each fair one seemed to spare no pains in the arrangement of her toilet The sterner sex paid every attention to complete ness of attire, and nothing was forgotten in this particular The whole scene was one of brilliant pleasure Dancing was the predominant feature contributing to the evening's pleasure and the usual intercourse on each occasion was freely indulged in during the intermissions Owing to the crowded state of the rooms set apart for the purpose of "tripping the light fantastic," many were debarred the pleasure of indulging in this portion of the entertainment as they could desire. However, this did not prevent the company from passing the evening in a manner agreeable to all concerned An excellent supper was provided which all discussed with evident satisfaction The music was charming and prompting acceptable Appended is a list of several prominent personages who graced the company with their attendance Miss Cleonine M—r, Miss Etta C—e Miss Minnie C—h Miss Emma M—d Miss Abbie A—d Miss Etta H—t, Miss — W—y Miss H—s Miss — H—s, Miss Emma U—n the Misses K—y the Misses R—s, Mr and Mrs Sim R—d, Mr and Mrs Mc D—h Mr and Mrs Louis V. WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE CONVENTION

A Mass Meeting of the Friends and Advocates of the Woman Movement held at Oro Fino Theater

FOURTH DAY'S PROCEEDINGS

Pursuant to liberal announcement a meeting was held by the friends of the Woman Suffrage Movement, at Oro Fino Theater yesterday morning

The meeting was advertised to convene at 10 o clock but the friends of the cause were a little tardy in consequence of the inclemency of the morning and the meeting was not called to order until half an hour later

The attendance was quite sparse, but there seemed to be no abatement of the ardor of advocates of the movement while a remarkable degree of earnestness and enthusiasm characterized the meeting notwithstanding the somewhat unpropitious surroundings

Mrs W T Shanahan the President of the Multnomah county Woman Suffrage Association, being unable to attend the meeting in consequence of illness the Convention was called to order by the Vice President, Mrs D W Williams

Mrs Williams on taking her seat proceeded to explain at some length the object of the Convention She stated that all present had assembled to declare their rights, in the same spirit which actuated the Revolutionary Fathers, who had met and declared their rights against the tyrannical encroachment of the mother country. Woman was originally created the equal of man but her rights had been usurped and wrested by force from her The object of the Convention was simply to demand that measure of freedom accorded men All that the advocates and friends of female suffrage claimed, was equal rights before the laws To that they were justly entitled, and it was to secure that great desired end that a general call was made One of the principal objects of the Mass Convention was to effect a permanent organization of a State Society, so as to secure more united action and influence in the work The Speaker stated that now was the time for firm concerted and persistent action, and that she hoped good feeling and harmony would characterize their deliberations

Mrs Thompson moved that the Convention proceed to effect a temporary organization The motion prevailed

The name of Mrs D W Williams was placed in nomination for President pro tem, which motion was unanimously carried

Mrs Duniway moved that Mrs C. A Coburn be chosen as temporary Secretary of the Convention This motion prevailed without a dissenting voice

At the request of the members of the Convention Mrs Duniway proceeded to address the meeting for some time on the objects for which the call had been issued

At the conclusion of that lady s remarks, it was moved that the Convention proceed to the selection of a committee of three persons on permanent organization

By common consent, the authority of appointing the members of the committee was delegated to the President

Mrs Thompson moved to amend the motion relating to the appointment of a committee, by inserting five instead of three persons

The motion was carried and the President named as such committee Mrs C B Gibson, Mrs A J Duniway, Col C A Reed, Mrs Dr Thompson, and Mr R G Combs

In response to an invitation extended by the President, Col Reed addressed the Convention at some length

As the committee on Permanent Organization required some time to prepare their report, Mrs Duniway moved that the Convention adjourn until 2 30 o clock P M

The motion prevailed, and the Convention stood adjourned to that time

AFTERNOON

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment, Mrs D W Williams, President pro tem, in the Chair

The Committee on Permanent Organization submitted a report, which was read and adopted The Committee recommended that the Association be called the Oregon Woman Suffrage Association, and that the officers consist of a President, a Vice President from each county, a Recording Secretary, a Corresponding Secretary, and an Executive Committee of five

At this point, Mrs Hurd expressed a desire to see some steps taken by the Convention toward the formation of a new political party, stating that the old ones were about defunct

Mrs Duniway said the women who were supposed to be engineering this Convention were not yet voters, and therefore could accomplish but little in an active political party.

Mr Reed thought the gentlemen who were sitting in the rear part of the hall had better come forward, whereupon some debate was indulged in, and Mrs Duniway moved that the timid gentlemen be invited to come to the front, but the motion was not put to a vote Several gentlemen, however, came forward

On motion, the Convention proceeded to the election of officers, by choosing as President Mrs Abbie Gibson, of Portland

On motion, the Chair appointed C A Reed, C B Gibson, and Mrs R Williams as a committee of three to conduct the President elect to the chair The committee conducted Mrs Gibson upon the platform and by C A Reed their chairman, introduced her to the Convention whereupon she took her seat as President

The following Vice Presidents were then chosen Miss Melissa Cleaver, of Baker county Hon F A Chenoweth, of Benton, Hon W Carey Johnson, of Clackamas Col J Taylor of Clatsop Hon Enoch G Adams, of Columbia Mrs B A Owens of Douglas, Hon M Baker, of Grant I D Applegate of Jackson, Hon J H D Henderson, of Lane Mrs J H Foster Linn Mrs M O Moore, of Marion, Mrs Susie Witherell of Multnomah, Hon P C Sullivan, of Polk Hon Samuel Corwin, of Tillamook, Mrs C H Bean, of Umatilla Hon J Hendersbott of Union Mrs Z Donnell of Wasco, Mrs C A Coburn, of Washington, Miss Virginia Olds, of Yamhill

The officers and executive Committee were authorized to appoint suitable persons to act as Vice Presidents from Coos, Curry and Josephine counties, respectively

The other officers elected were Corresponding Secretary Mrs Susie Witherell Recording Secretary, Mrs C A Coburn, Treasurer D H Henderson Executive Committee Mrs D W Williams R G Combs Mrs J Dovore Johnson, Mrs H C Brown and Col C A Reed

A motion was made that a committee of five persons be appointed on resolutions Carried

The President appointed as such committee Rev T L Eliot, Col C A Reed, Col L H Briggs, Mrs A J Duniway and Mr McLeod

Motion was made and carried that a committee of three on Order of Business be appointed

The President appointed Rev T L Eliot, Mrs A J Duniway and Mrs C ck

On motion a committee of three consisting of Mrs A J. Duniway Mrs C A Coburn and Mrs Susie Witherell were appointed to draft an address to the people of Oregon

The Committee on Programme asked permission to retire to consult on business before them which was granted

Rev T L Eliot was called upon and made a few remarks stating in substance that the movement in which the Convention was concerned was one of great and far wing interest and that in a year or two more it would be the greatest question before the public Unfortunate alliances which a few years ago seemed and perhaps only seemed, to be connected with the movement were now well understood to be broken off and all true men and women would join in the movement with cheerful hearts and good hopes The cause already has the reason and the conscience of the masses on its side, but prejudice was far more difficult to overcome than reason to convince or conscience to convert The speaker warned the members of the Convention that the plan was to discard passion in their deliberations and not oppose prejudice

Mr Peters stated a number of persons had agreed to loan the editor of the New Northwest different sums of money to aid in publishing her paper which was doing good work in the cause of Woman Suffrage and enable the editor to deliver lectures in different parts of the State. That the paper ought to be sustained and the people were able to sustain it but what they wanted was willingness He therefore asked the Secretary to read the conditions on which the required aid is to be furnished with the names of those who had tendered their help Some of the members also availed themselves of the opportunity and made liberal subscriptions to the loan On motion of Mr Reed the Associa tion took a recess until half past seven P M

EVENING SESSION

The Association met pursuant to adjournment the President Mrs Abbie B Gibson in the chair

The attendance was quite large and evinced a very earnest and growing interest in the proceedings of the Convention

The journal of the day's proceedings were read by Mrs C A Coburn and approved

The Convention and audience were favored with some excellent music by Mr and Mrs McGlenny after which Mrs A J Duniway spoke in her usual terse and telling style She argued that as the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States declared that the States could not exclude from the enjoyment of political rights and privileges any person on account of race color or previous condition of servitude No State could constitutionally exclude women from these rights, because women belonged to a race women had color, and had certainly gone through the previous condition of servitude Our report of Mrs Duniway's address is necessarily brief for want of space, but we can say that it was altogether interesting and the applause which she received from the large audience evinced the fact that their sentiments on the subject in hand were fully aroused in sympathy with our own fair townswoman as she stood before them and demanded as a right what has been so long appealed for as a privilege in vain—the enfranchisement of all the tax payers of the land

At the conclusion of the address Prof and Mrs McGibney again beautifully sang The Dawning of Day

A collection was then taken up to defray the expense of rent and lights for the hall during the sessions of the Association The subject of the proceeding and to the New Northwest was again laid before the audience An essay on Home was read by Mrs C A Coburn It was a very well written article and the thoughts it contained, though in some respects trite, were terely expressed and reflected more severely on the animal called 'Man' than anything yet presented to the convention It was to the effect that the husband or wife alone would no more make a happy home without the other than man had succeeded in making a perfect government without the aid of woman It contained much excellent advice to husbands

A few remarks were then made by Mrs Taylor a representative of the State Woman Suffrage Convention of Pennsylvania, and the programme found elsewhere announced

The several committees were called to meet at 10 o'clock this morning and on motion, the Association adjourned until 2 o'clock P M to day

Measuring the Baby.

We measured yesterday baby
Against the cottage wall,
A lily grew at the threshold,
And the boy was just as tall.
A royal tiger lily,
With spots of purple and gold,
And a heart like a jeweled chalice,
Thu fragrant dew to hold.

Without the blackbird a whistled,
High up in the elm roof trees,
And to and fro at the window
The red rose rocked her knees
And the wee pink fists of baby
Were never a moment still,
Snatching at shine and shadow
That danced at the latticed sill.

At me in a darkened chamber,
With the sunshine shut away,
Through to us that fell like bitter rain
We measured the baby to-day,
And the little bare feet that were dimpled
And sweet as a budding rose,
Lay side by side together,
In the hush of a long repose.

Up from the dainty pillow,
White as the rising dawn,
A fair little face lay smiling
With the light of heaven thereon
And the dear little hands, like rose leaves
Dropped from the rose by wind,
Never to catch at the sunshine
That crept to the shrouded sill

We measured the slender baby
With ribbons white as snow,
For the sliding rosewood casket
That waited him below.
And one of the darkened chamber
We went with a childless moan
For in the height of the sinless angels
Our dear little one had grown.

The Wrong Answer.

In the old days, forty years ago, when country teachers boarded round from family to family, and when a dozen young men and women about midway in their teens might be found in every well-to-do rustic schoolhouse during the winter term, young William Gladstone, now Judge Gladstone, of the United States Supreme Court, was school teacher in the Bound Brook neighborhood. The young man, then reading law, comprehended that school teaching would replenish his purse, and need not greatly interfere with his studies.

Our hero, making his way to the best school district in the adjoining town, found the principal trustee, and confidently made application for the vacant situation of pedagogue for the four and a half months, autumn and winter.

"Yes, young man, yes, I know all about you," answered the sharp old trustee. "You're Square Gladstone's son and college bred, so we can calculate that you've got learning enough to suit us; but that don't say nothing against flirting. Now last winter the whole desatrict was pestered with flying rumors about love making down there to the school. First it was one girl and then another the master wanted, and of course all the great boys followed suit. But come spring, nothing had taken root deep enough to go on growing in warm weather. Now this year, mind, I'm going to set my foot down sgarnst all that. You can have the school, and welcome, if you give me a pledge that you won't introduce courting as a fine art, taught either by precept nor yet by example. If you can be sure you have the nerve to set your face against all billing and cooing, you are the man we want exactly. We old fogies are not altogether against a young man's paying attentions and marrying at the proper time, when he really means it, but the trustees, to a man, have made up their minds that last year's doings can't be repeated in our school. Now, then, young square, what have you got to say about it?"

Young Gladstone's face beamed as sunnily as a May morning during this little harrangue. He wheeled about, his open, laughing eye looking straight into the intensely earnest face of the trustee, and answered, frankly, "I give you my solemn pledge, sir, not to flirt with the pretty girls, to lead the boys by example to be as exemplary in this respect as the quietest old gentleman in the neighborhood, and as far as I can, consistently, I don't mind agreeing to add a very little precept also now and then."

"That'll do nicely."

"I intend to go on with my studies in leisure hours, and shall be altogether too busy myself for flirtations or for love-making."

"It is a bargain. I engage you out of hand to begin the school from next Monday to the last Monday in October!" cried the delighted trustee, pulling at the great button on the front of his coat with such vigor that the weak threads snapped asunder.

The young gentleman ratified the contract.

"You mean to get admitted to the bar next year, I calculate, Mr. Gladstone?"

"So I hope, sir, if I am successful."

"Exactly. Nothing like real business to keep a youngster as steady as is respectable, and that is all we old fellows care about."

This time the undermined button gave way suddenly at the energetic pull of the trustee's great thumb and finger. The good man sat looking down at it a little ruefully. "Curious," he mused, half to himself. "Wife will know how that I am pleased. I generally sacrifice that button on the altar of the very highest satisfaction. That, now, is a trick started with the school lessons as low down as the spelling book. Mebby it come in with the first primer."

In due time the school began. It may be as well to say just here that the new master was immensely popular all winter, both with the pupils and with the all-powerful trustees. Our young friend thought it would be the easiest thing in the world to keep this agreement in a quiet, exemplary manner. All his days he had been sufficiently popular with scores of charming young ladies without undue flirting, and at present his thoughts were not at all fixed upon matrimony.

But "young Squire Gladstone" had not yet seen Susie Auber. She was his best and most charming pupil—a distracting little beauty, with dimples, brown eyes, graceful, winsome ways, laughter like music, and a voice always sweeter than the ripple of a meadow brooklet. The very first night of the first school day Susie Auber stepped bodily down into his embryo lawyer dreams, moving about among "Higgins versus Babcock," both of her plump white hands full of deeds, contracts, and old wills, which made him think of the Day of Judgment; and directly after she was teaching the children about legal tenures, which changed to nouns, verbs, tens, hundreds, and all the rest, down to A B C's; and the girlish hands were much prettier than the law papers which she held in them, though these were crammed full both of law and learning.

The next night Susie's face was shining like a transparency in every writing-book he the master set the copies; and when he thought of shutting it up in his desk, Susie herself flew out from the opening lid, as bright and as swift as a sunbeam, springing directly into the center of his own heart. He woke himself up by saying aloud, "If she wishes to stay there, I certainly shall never object."

After such a beginning what could we expect? It will not do to say that the fickle young man spent his winter in studying this absorbing girl much more diligently than he ever pored over his law books. He never thought of studying Susie or of understanding her; but he did think about her ten times oftener than he thought of anything else—if rose-colored reverie may be dignified with a name so profound—always deciding in his own mind that she was incomparably the sweetest, dearest little being in the universe, and that she was becoming yet more and more engaging every day, as she developed in beautiful womanliness under his very careful tuition.

Whenever this sunshiny pupil was away from school for a day, the whitewashed walls of the schoolroom looked as dingy as the blackboard in the eyes of the disgusted master. All the children had poor lessons, and were wonderfully stupid in catching his explanations. In those days the heavy boys' boots scraping the rough floor grated upon his nerves, the dress and manners of the girls were hopelessly countryfied; and all the little ones had the influenza. In those days the master studied diligently all through the morning, even while he munched pie and bread-and-butter for lunch; but if any curious eye had looked over his shoulder, it might have discovered a little pencil-drawing of Susie Auber's face doing a duty as bookmark between the ponderous pages of Blackstone.

And what of the young girl herself? Can one be the object of so much earnest devotion without knowing it? Pledges and good resolutions are rarely strong enough to bind glances from adoring eyes, and to hold the tones of a voice in fetters. At least there are unguarded moments when these will slip the leash to enjoy a brief moment of delightful freedom.

For the next six weeks of school Susie felt sure that she was becoming very dear to the young teacher, as a natural consequence, the teacher was fast becoming very dear also to his sympathetic pupil. It was her right. He had spent a fortnight of that time as boarder at her father's house, and in her own mind she was entirely assured that her parents believed in the young man as a very eligible party for general family adoption. Then our Susie had not been bright and pretty all her life for nothing. She expected every young gentleman of her acquaintance to be a little fascinated as a matter of course. But in this case she was not perversely disinclined to something more serious and more permanent.

The months went by, yet the master had become more reserved or shy than in the beginning. He had always chatted freely and cordially with his pupils, and in this excellent habit he still continued, but there had been no advances in loving-making. Susie was piqued—perhaps a trifle indignant—with a growing sense of being somehow wronged and defrauded. Either the master sometimes looked too much, or he said altogether too little, and the child found herself quite unable to solve the puzzle.

It was only a fortnight now before the school would close, yet no progress had been made. They met one evening, unexpectedly to both, at the house of a neighbor. When it was time to return home, Mr. Gladstone could hardly do less than to act as attendant, but that half hour in the bewitching presence, with all its school-girlishness laid aside, had entirely overcome his prudent resolution to delay the period of his love-making. He forgot that Susie had shared none of the golden reveries in which he had lived all winter, and, where in his thought she had reigned as queen of a realm sacred to themselves. Delighted, excited, and irresistibly in earnest as they left the house, quite too hastily and abruptly he asked her to become his wife.

Susie was startled; her best feelings received a shock. To become engaged without any of those sweet preliminaries of which she had always shyly dreamed, seemed like a perversion of right. Spirited and wayward, without taking time to consider, she said no promptly, perhaps indignantly.

Even then it might have all come right during the ten minutes' walk which followed; but unluckily they were overtaken by a party of chattering young people. Mr. Gladstone, in his present reckless mood, kept them merry in conversation till they left Susie at her own door, when he turned back alone in the darkness and tramped over the frozen ground, feeling a kind of satisfaction, as though he were stamping out all the remnants of sentiment in his own chilling heart. Susie, shut up in the darkness of her room, repeated at leisure. Evidently at the bottom of this odd style of wooing there was an intense sincerity. Why, then, had all this happened? and could they remain still at cross-purposes? Could two people throw away happiness so perversely?

The next day she found that they undoubtedly could. Something still and lifeless in the manner of the young teacher toward herself chilled the blood in her veins, making reconciliation impossible. Her smiles fell like moonlight upon an iceburg.

So the days crept slowly on. Everybody was demonstrative of their regrets at the approaching close of the school term; but the teacher, and one of the pupils at least, would have given much to feel that it was well over at once and forever. To meet every day as before seemed to both of them too severe a lesson in self-control. They counted the days, and at night they were both sincerely thankful that there was one less. Their estrangement grew with everything which occurred. Neither looked willingly in the face of the other, or exchanged a syllable more than was necessary between teacher and scholar; but the two young hearts were aching sorely.

And now there were but two more days to the close of the school. These over, they could go their several ways again, each learning to bear alone the sharp sting of that painful but not easily forgotten past. Alas! how often this has happened before!

"Good night, Square Auber, and ladies, both of you," said the principal trustee, stumbling into the little sitting-room of the family, and rubbing his unmittened fingers with zest. "This Spring weather is colder than a real Winter, I calculate. When every thing snaps like icicles, then the cold seems brittle and dry; but this wet cold is terrible!"

Once comfortably seated and warmed, the trustee began afresh:

"Well, we have had a good school this Winter. Every body admits that. The young man was the right sort. The truth is, between you and me, if Miss Susie there can keep a secret, I pledged the young fellow, to begin with, that he would set his face like a flint against school courting and all that. No flirtations heard of this Winter! It has worked like a charm. The scholars never learned so much before in one Winter, in my opinion; eh, Susie?"

"Perhaps not," answered the girl, quietly. But her heart was in her throat. Was that the reason, then, or any part of the reason, for the unwitting glances which had first won her heart without a word, only to toss it away at last upon the point of a word too abruptly spoken? Susie didn't know. There was nothing which could help her to decide. But she formed a plan which aroused all the courage in her heart, kindling fresh light in her eyes that flashed from every glance like arrows, and arrested the attention of the master the moment she entered the school-room next morning. "What did it mean?" he began to ask himself, and to look doubtfully. This question waited a solution.

They were to have a review in geography in the afternoon.

"What cape south of Greenland?" questioned the master.

"Cape Lookout," answered Susie promptly and steadily.

The color leaped rosily into the white brow of the master; his eye glanced on the next pupil.

"Cape Farewell," was the wondering response. Susie had never missed before in geography.

"Cape Farewell?" echoed Susie, in a low tone, a look of regret at her failure written over every line of her pretty face.

"Where is Cape Lookout?" asked the teacher of the next pupil.

"East of North Carolina."

"What other cape east of North Carolina?"

"Cape Fear."

"Yes. Many of the prominent capes have significant names like these," said the master, in his pleasant instructive tone. It was his custom to make the lessons interesting by remarks like this.

On went the questions down the line of a long class, and once more it was Susie's turn. "What cape south of Ireland?"

"Cape of Good Hope," smiled Susie innocently. Everybody laughed. "Oh, no! I have given the wrong answer. I did that once before," answered Susie deliberately. "It is Cape Clear."

"Certainly, Cape Clear," affirmed the master. "Whether it signifies fair weather, the last lie to the land behind, or whether it is named as a warning against hidden rocks, I cannot say."

"I think the late requires the best construction to be put on everything, unless there is good reason to the contrary," answered Susie, saucily, and with a little defiant laugh.

"Tell me the names of the principal countries of Europe," said the master, turning hastily to the next in class, his face at red-heat, and his voice crisp and cutting. It was nearly the last day, studying was over, the reins of government had been held rather loosely since the morning; yet now the girls opened their eyes frowning at their naughty classmate, and one boy nudged another with the audible whisper, "Susie is chaffing the master."

The master closed the examination after half a dozen more questions; yet everybody noticed that his vexation was extremely shortlived. He smiled at the little ones who stumbled wofully over mental arithmetic in their eagerness to get out of school early, as he promised, if they would give close attention; and he excused all mistakes in the most genial manner possible. Susie caught a glint of sunshine and forgiveness in his eye, and was satisfied.

That evening Mr. Gladstone spent with Susie; and though he never repeated the old question, and Susie never gave the right answer, yet they must have learned how to compromise their mutual grievances, for only last week they celebrated their fortieth anniversary of their wedding in the presence of children and grandchildren. All is well that ends well; but it is currently understood that the spirited Mrs. Gladstone has claimed and received ample payment for all lack of the usual graceful courtesies of the courting days. Defrauded of a just preliminary amount of such attentions, her claim has been running at interest ever since—the portly judge, like a chivalrous gentleman as he is, having been for these forty years as tenderly attentive to his still bonny wife as any young lover. He has judiciously decided that the old debt being of a kind which in the nature of the case can never be repaid as to the principal, it must lie against him as a perpetual claim forever.—Harper's Bazar.

Particulars of Senator Pomeroy's Disgrace.

The Topeka (Kansas) correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, writing under date of January 20th, after giving some preliminaries in regard to an interview between York, the member, and some of Pomeroy's friends, in which the former stipulated that he must deal with the Senator himself and no one else, says:

At last Pomeroy suspended the by laws of his caution and his piety, and entered squarely into negotiations with York. The latter was none of your ten cent fellows. He told Pomeroy his constituents had threatened to hang him if he voted for the old man, and so it would be necessary for him to sell out for enough to insure his neck. He further said that if he voted for Pomeroy he should never dare to live in Montgomery county again, and hence he must sell out for enough to enable him to remove to some other locality, and to indemnify him against any sacrifices of property he might have to make in disposing of his effects in Montgomery.

The recital harrowed up the old man's bowels of Christian compassion, and he offered York about $5,000. This York felt obliged to decline.

The case was one of desperation with him, and he must have at least $8,000. At this old Pomeroy made a good many wry faces, but finally effected a compromise on this basis, to-wit: $2,000 down, $5,000 within forty-eight hours, and the other $1,000 after he was elected. Well, York took his $2,000 and attended the Pomeroy caucus, where he made the speech of a proselyte, and was among the humblest of the late and contrite converts. The next day he went and got his $5,000, which he quietly put in his pocket, along with the other $2,000, and having Pomeroy's promise to pay an additional $1,000 after he was elected. That last $1,000 York will probably lose.

Things went on lovely till after Tuesday's separate ballots, and then the mischief began to bubble up to the surface. On Tuesday night the anti-Pomeroy people held a caucus, at which a concentration was effected upon Ingalls, with a pledged strength of sixty-two.

When the House and Senate went into joint ballot to-day, there was no man in the entire hall whose face had in it so much of the lurking devilment of conspiracy as glittered in York's eyes, and balefully lit up his pale face. It was not long after the assembling of the joint convention, before the presiding officer rapped order with his gavel, and announced that the Legislature of Kansas in joint convention would now proceed to ballot for United States Senator for the full term, beginning March 4th, 1873.

THE DAMNING DEED EXPOSED.

There was a dead hush then, as Senator York of Montgomery arose and claimed the floor on a question of privilege, which was granted him. He drew from his pocket an envelope containing seven thousand dollars in current funds, walked down the aisle and laid it in front of the Speaker, with the request that he count the money. There was a little buzz of surprise, and then a hush of strained expectancy as the Speaker turned over the crisp notes, and York walked back to his seat. "Gentlemen," said York, "I have an explanation to make to this body upon my vote for Senator. I shall vote for Samuel C. Pomeroy for the best reason in the world, and that reason is now on the desk of your presiding officer." There were a good many pale and scared faces in that hall then. He then went out and detailed the circumstances of his bribery.

As he proceeded the excitement became intense, and finally whenever the name of Pomeroy was mentioned there would be a storm of indignation. It was a revelation. York caught its fervor in the fine fibers of his nervous organism and became inspired. He said: "I know I am a disgraced man; I have wilfully and of my malice aforethought betrayed a trust reposed in me by a fellow-man. I did it with eyes wide open, and a mind full of comprehension of the consequences; but I did it because I thought it was a sacrifice required of me to save my State from sinking still deeper into the quicksands of corruption in which her once fair fame is already almost swallowed up. I stand before you pledged to vote for Samuel C. Pomeroy in consideration of $7,000 to me in hand paid in current funds, and the promise of $1,000, payable upon a contingency. I ask you must I redeem that pledge? [Cries of "No, no; damn Pomeroy and his money."] I ask you if I am in your minds a disgraced man? [Cries of "No, no; you did right."] I ask you if the end does not justify the means? [Cries of "Yes, yes" and loud cheers.]

Then York closed his speech with an impassioned peroration that raised the wildest tumult in the hall and in the galleries, and sat down.

THE BALLOTING.

It was several minutes before the presiding officer could restore order, and then the balloting began. The Pomeroy forces stampeded like a herd of Texas steers breaking for timber when a norther comes to them. Cringing mercenaries, who had sounded his praises preparatory to their votes for him on Tuesday's ballot, shrunk down in their seats till you could have hidden them behind a gopher hill or a stand of bunch grass. When their names were called they feebly voted for Ingalls and subsided. It was a rout and a slaughter. The battalion had gone for it in all the pomp and pride and panoply of Pomeroyism and patronage in the morning; they were shirking, suave, quiescent at noon.

THE DISGRACED SENATOR.

With all his power, and his money, and his prestige of yesterday, to-day Pomeroy found not even a postmaster so poor as to do him honor. The evil news had been carried to him, and his room was locked in the face of all comers. The old man was crushed at noon, as the ballot was finished and Ingalls declared elected. I went down to the Tefft house to see Pomeroy, but he had no use for the representative of the Republican. In fact he had no use for anybody, but the sheriff had some use for Pomeroy.

The arrangements for the sale of $1 0,000,000 of the new five per cent bonds have already been perfected with Jay Cooke & Co., and Morton, Bliss & Co., by the Secretary of the Treasury. The first named firm is connected with the Rothschilds, and the latter with the Baring Bros., of London. The Commercial Herald says "It is presumed that the Syndicate, to whom the negotiation is to be entrusted will be able to perfect their object within one year. One hundred millions of the five-twenties are said to be held in this country, and the balance in Europe. Propositions to take shares have already been made by a large number of American bankers. The law of July 14, 1870, as amended in January, 1871, authorizes the issuance of $300,000,000 4½ per cent bonds, and $700,000,000 5 per cent bonds, the negotiation of which will form the subject of future consideration; but there is little room to doubt their placement before the term of the present Administration shall expire. The whole matter is subject to affirmation or rejection by Congress."

The same paper says of financial matters in San Francisco

Much astonishment and not a little curiosity have been excited at the continued stringency in our money market just at the close of a year of unprecedented prosperity in agriculture, mining, merchandising, and extension of maritime commerce; but the wonder will probably cease when we inform our readers that the odious tactics of Wall Street have been employed in California Street for some time past and are still exerting their influence to crush and ruin. It is alleged, and we believe with truth, that a clique has been formed to lock up large amounts of money with the view of forcing compulsory sales of stocks and breaking down prices generally. Some six weeks ago, a quarter of a million dollars was obtained in one loan from a certain bank, the security given being coin, and the borrower ordered that it should be sealed and locked up in the bank's vaults, paying one per cent per month for the privilege. This is but one transaction, and there is sufficient cause to believe that three were entered more of like character. Taken in connection with the large amounts paid for taxes and safely housed in State and county treasuries, the sump yet locked up in whent, and the employment of more than the usual quantity of funds for agricultural and other requirements incident upon a lengthy increased area of cultivation, we are not surprised at the stringent condition of our market. How long it may suit the convenience of the clique to keep money out of circulation remains to be determined, but it is safe to presume that interest charges will compel relaxation of the constrictor folds before a great while longer shall elapse.

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT—We note but few transactions. Producers still claim that an advance will take place, while buyers appear equally confident of the opposite tendency of the market. The quotation furnished to-day is $1 60 2 cental, but at an hour this evening we learn of the sale of 20,000 bushels by a buyer from Linn county to the exporters here, but the terms are private. We also learn that $1 65 was publicly offered for a similar lot. Smaller lots might not command so much, but we leave the facts before our readers, allowing them to form their own judgment in the premises.

FLOUR—The receipts keep well up to the demand. Prices are unchanged but dull. Superfine has found slow sale during the entire season. Extra $6 50 ₰ bbl; country brands $4 @$5, and superfine $4.

OATS—Full receipts are noted, and the quotations last given are unchanged from 60c ₰ bushel.

FEED—The market is well supplied at $15@18 ₰ ton for bran; $27@29 for shorts, and $30@32 for middlings and chops.

HAY—But little has come to hand to-day, but prices seem disinclined to advance, the tendency being rather to droop. Timothy is only in moderate request at $17 50 @19 ₰ ton.

BARLEY—Nominal quotations are furnished at $1 40 @1 60 ₰ 100 lbs.

BUTTER—Market well supplied at the old figures

EGGS—Unchanged prices; market well supplied, and no material demand is the only comment to be made to-day.

BACON—Full receipts continue, and prices seem but little or no stronger than last given. Lard dittto.

Other products remain as quoted by us yesterday.
